CARSON LEADS IN IOWA

1 Ben Carson has pushed past Donald Trump among party voters in the key early voting state of Iowa, a Quinnipiac University opinion poll showed. In the survey of 574 likely Iowa Republican caucus participants, 28 percent said they would support Carson. REUTERS

US SERVICEMAN KILLED

2 One member of a U.S. special operations team was killed during an operation to rescue hostages held by Islamic State militants in northern Iraq, the first American killed in ground combat with the militant group, U.S. officials said on Thursday. Around 70 hostages were successfully rescued during the operation, Pentagon press secretary Peter Cook said in a statement. U.S. special operations forces were assisting Iraqi Kurdish peshmerga forces in rescuing hostages held at an Islamic State prison near Hawija. REUTERS

BENGHAZI TESTIMONY

3 Hillary Clinton defended her handling of the deadly 2012 attacks in Benghazi, Libya, from Republican criticism during testimony and urged her interrogators in Congress to put national security ahead of politics. Her appearance before the Benghazi panel was another challenge for Clinton. REUTERS

HANDS-FREE DANGERS

4 Drivers can be distracted for as long as 27 seconds after performing activities, even when using hands-free technologies, according to a study by the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety. The results raise "new and unexpected concerns" about the use of phones and vehicle information systems while driving. REUTERS

OVERRIDE OF GUN BILL

5 The New Jersey Senate will vote whether to override Gov. Chris Christie's veto of a bill that requires courts and law enforcement to exchange information before people trying to purchase a firearm can have their medical records expunged. Christie, who is running for the 2016 Republican presidential nomination, rejected the bill in August after it passed unanimously in both the state Senate and Assembly. The vote comes after several recent mass shootings. REUTERS

DEFENSE BILL VETOED

6 President Barack Obama vetoed a sweeping $612 billion defense policy bill on Thursday, returning the measure to the Republican-controlled Congress because of the way it uses money meant for war spending to avoid automatic budget cuts to military programs. REUTERS

BRIEF

Frat members in hazing death charged with murder

Charles Lai, 24, of Queens Village, New York; Kenny Kwan, 26, of Astoria, New York; Raymond Lam, 22, and Daniel Li, 22, both of Kew Garden Hills, New York; and Sheldon Wong, 23, of Queens, New York, were all charged with third-degree murder at their preliminary hearing on charges related to the death of an 19-year-old freshman who was being hazed for admission to the Pi Delta Psi frat in a house in Butler.

Michael Deng died of brain and other injuries inflicted during a pledging ritual known as the "glass ceiling," police said. Blindfolded and wearing a 30-pound pack, he was tackled repeatedly and slammed to the ground, they said.

The pack was supposed to represent the weight of Pi Delta Psi, which describes itself as an Asian-American cultural fraternity. The "glass ceiling" gauntlet is intended to symbolize the difficulties Asian-Americans experience in battling prejudice.

The rented house where Deng was found dead is about 96 miles west of New York City.

With Thursday's arraignments, all 37 defendants will have been formally charged. Pennsylvania law then provides for a preliminary hearing, where the prosecution presents the main points of its case to prove the arrest was justified.

Nine of the 37 defendants were scheduled for hearings on Oct. 16, but eight waived the hearing, and the ninth was granted a postponement.

More hearings are scheduled for Friday, and some or all of those may be waived.

Preliminary hearings for the final six — the five defendants being arraigned Thursday, plus the one postponed on Oct. 16 — are set for early November. METRO

Escaped from church of hate

Granddaughters of Westboro Baptist Church's founder speak.

ERNEST OWENS

letters@metro.us

Two members from the heart of one of the nation's most notorious cultlike organizations provided a view into their mindset at a talk in Philadelphia on Thursday.

"Our upbringing was an epic battle between good and evil," was how Megan Phelps-Roper, 29, speaking at the National Constitution Center, described growing up in the Westboro Baptist Church, which was founded by her grandfather, Fred Phelps.

Megan and her younger sister, Grace Phelps-Roper, were guest speakers at a private conference on hate and hate speech sponsored by the Anti-Defamation League, the U.S. Attorney's Office and the FBI.

The Phelps-Roper sisters' grandfather, Fred Phelps, is pastor of the controversial Westboro Baptist Church that is known for its often homophobic demonstrations of hate speech across America, which are often infamously staged at the funerals of American soldiers. The sisters left the church in November 2012.

"We know that we've done and said things that hurt people," Grace said.

The two women were selected as keynote speakers for the "Raised & Recruited" section of the conference.

Megan spoke candidly about her experiences after a video was shown of their participation in the church's activities.

"I was afraid I was going to go to hell — I didn't want God to kill us," she said. "Leaving the church at first made us terrified."

"I think that if they can change their heart, it's possible for anyone," said Jim M., an employee of the U.S. Attorney's Office who declined to give his full name for security reasons. "I'm really here to understand what can make someone so hateful and commit such violations."

A women sitting next to him in the audience, Sally P., a mother of two, was more concerned about the parenting aspect of the conversation.

"The girls said they were brainwashed and I believe them," she said. "It's clear that for those raised in environments where religion is used as a law and not an option — people can be more susceptible to committing a hate crime."

Megan told the crowd that her goal now is "to do good…to have empathy."

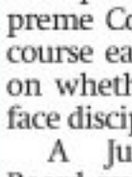
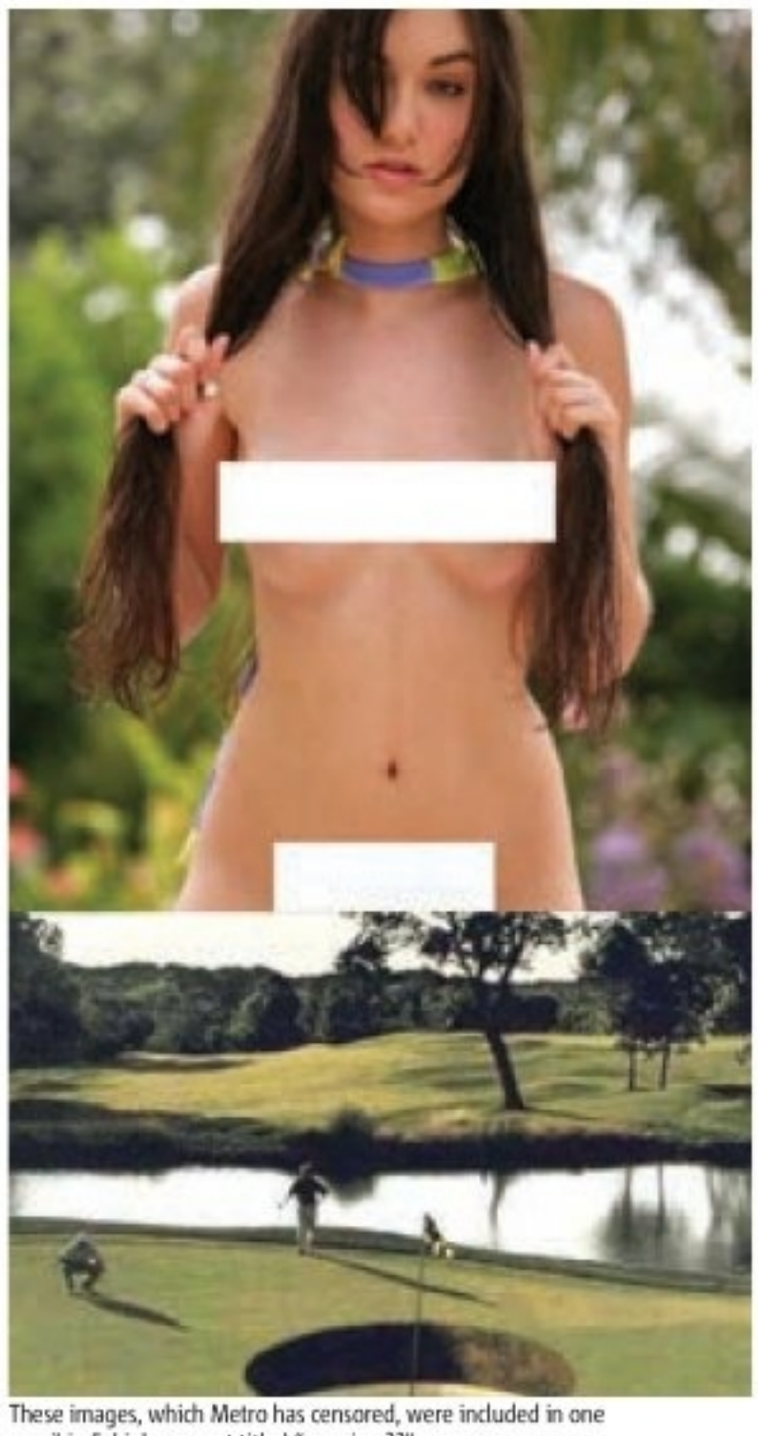
AG Kane releases judge's porn emails

Messages from Justice Michael Eakin's private account were made public.



SAM NEWHOUSE
@scnewhouse
sam.newhouse@metro.us



These images, which Metro has censored, were included in one email in Eakin's account titled "cup sizes??" PROVIDED

In the latest chapter in the ongoing saga of embattled Attorney General Kathleen Kane, Kane's office today released 49 emails to the media from the private account of state Supreme Court Justice Michael Eakin.

"This set of emails is, however, only a subset of the pornographic, misogynistic and racist emails received and sent by Justice Eakin on his private email," a statement released by Kane's office said.

Eakin sat on the panel of five Supreme Court judges who voted to suspend Kane's law license due to her current indictment on perjury charges.

The release of the emails partly seems to be in response to the state Supreme Court's reversal of course earlier this month on whether Eakin would face disciplinary action.

A Judicial Conduct Board review in 2014 dismissed complaints over Eakin's emails, but after the Supreme Court said this month that it was "disturbed" by the emails and would seek a new review by independent counsel, the Judicial Conduct Board said it had not had access to all of the emails at the time of their review.

Kane fired back that she had provided 1,000 emails from Eakin's private Yahoo account to the Board. Now she has provided them to the public.

"As the Judicial Conduct Board (JCB) has now placed its analysis into the public domain based upon Justice Eakin's waiver of confidentiality, and seemingly and/or released upon my discretion due to public policy reasons," Kane wrote in a letter Wednesday to Supreme Court chief justice Thomas Saylor. "I intend to release all of the emails referred to in the [Judicial Conduct Board] JCB's letter as 'images that can best be described as mildly pornographic or sexually suggestive in the vein of material that appears commonly in Playboy.'"

Eakin released a statement apologizing for the emails.

"The items chosen for release do not reflect my character or beliefs, nor have they ever been part of my consideration of any case or business of the court. I do not offer this as an excuse, and will continue to cooperate fully with the independent review by the court and by the conduct board," Eakin said.

Most of the emails were just received by Eakin, whose Yahoo account listed his name as "John Smith."

Some were forwarded by him. In one, responding to a comment by Jeffrey Baxter, a prosecutor at the Attorney General's office, who wrote, "All blondes. Just my types!" an email from Eakin's account says, "This lineup at Dollhouse, Bax's entire week's bankroll is gone in an hour."

The release of the emails follows a previous declaration from Kane that she would release all offensive emails her office has recovered that have been requested by various right-to-know requests.

Kane, who was charged with perjury over releasing grand jury information to the press, has claimed that she is being targeted by a "boy's club" of attorneys and politicians in revenge for her discovery of pornographic emails that were being swapped around by prosecutors, judges, and other law enforcement figures.

Justice Seamus McCaffery retired after his receipt of some pornographic emails was revealed.

Seth Williams represents what's wrong with Philly's justice system

ERNEST OWENS

The Ernest Opinion

Award-winning multimedia journalist Ernest Owens is a keen observer of social, LGBT and race issues in Philadelphia. Follow him @MrErnestOwens

If you aren't a straight, privileged man in Philadelphia, don't expect the district attorney's office to do all it can to give you justice.

There were two major moments for our district attorney, Seth Williams, to defy the current distaste many locals have for our legal system, and he just dropped the ball.

Not only dropped it, but didn't give a damn that he did.

Last week, two of the three suspects in the September 2014 attack on a gay couple in Philadelphia entered guilty pleas that banned them from Center City — but received no jail time. While the victims were satisfied with the decision and Williams made the excuse "about honoring the wishes of the victims to make sure they can continue to heal and gain closure," I'm not pleased.

Not because I don't think victims shouldn't have a right to move on from pain — but because I believe there's racial and sexual orientation bias. Two straight white men who committed a hate crime are granted freedom while an exponential number of black men who carry a small weed bag would've done some hard time. If this were a straight couple assaulted, the men would have been handcuffed and sentenced swiftly.

But when you are white, privileged and homophobic, your bigotry still allows you to go home to your families. Anyone else would have been in a cell. Go do a headcount at the Philly police department if you don't believe me. While our district attorney prides himself on pleasing the victims — and still showing the rest of us that "separate but equal" punishment is becoming the law of the Philly — his ability to hold his own staff accountable is even worse.

> "When you are white, privileged and homophobic, your bigotry still allows you to go home to your families. Anyone else would have been in a cell."

When Williams didn't fire three Philly prosecutors, including two central to Attorney General Kathleen Kane's grand jury perjury case, for forwarding and not reporting the pornographic and racially offensive emails they received while working in the attorney general's office — I was disgusted.

"None [of the emails] were circulated to or by them while employed in my office," said Williams to the press in justifying his decision to not fire them but offer Frank Fina, E. Marc Costanzo and Patrick Blessington sensitivity training instead.

So let me get this straight — if you accept and tolerate sexist and racist messages via email on taxpayers' dollars, you only get sensitivity training? If a schoolteacher did that while on the job would the same punishment be given?

Williams' lax attitude toward homophobic and sexist misconduct reflects a double standard that should be questioned at the political level. Why isn't anyone in his party questioning these unprogressive transgressions? If we have prosecutors employed that enjoy viewing the degrading of women and people of color — why would anyone think they would be the best people to have defending our diverse city's liberty? Seth Williams either needs to step up or get out of office, because my black gay feminist life matters, and I want to be assured that it does at the DA's office.

Sandusky is led away in handcuffs. GETTY IMAGES

Alleged victim of Sandusky demands trial

His complaint wasn't part of original prosecution.

A Massachusetts man who claims he was molested by former Penn State football coach Jerry Sandusky as a teenager told a Pennsylvania judge that the case should be prosecuted even though the events in question date to 1988.

A lawyer for Anthony Spinelli Jr., now 43, argued that the statute of limitations — the deadline for bringing criminal charges — still had years to run in the case and that Spinelli's private criminal complaint should go forward.

"My client wants to come into court and stare down the person who did this to him," said attorney Daniel Kiss.

Lawyers for the Pennsylvania Attorney General countered by saying state law precluded a prosecution of Sandusky, who served as an assistant to legendary Penn State head coach Joe Paterno, no matter what evidence existed to support Spinelli's accusations.

"Every victim is not entitled to stare down that person," said Laura Ditka, a lawyer from the attorney general's staff. "Is there a crime that can be prosecuted?"

Judge Thomas Kistler of the Centre County Court of Common Pleas, admitted in court that the Pennsylvania statute of limitations on sex crimes was so confusing that he had his clerk draw up a chart. He said he would take the arguments under consideration and render a decision at a later date.

"Every victim is not entitled to stare down that person."
Ditka

Spinelli declined to comment afterward. A friend, Nick Carbone, said Spinelli was upset by the state's arguments.

Attorney General Kathleen Kane ruled in May that while Spinelli's complaint was "compelling," she believed too much time had elapsed to prosecute the case successfully.

In 2012, Sandusky was convicted of 45 of 48 child molestation charges filed against him, but Spinelli's case was not part of the prosecution. The former coach is serving a 30-to-60-year sentence in the state's "supermax" prison in Waynesburg.

Spinelli says he was twice molested by Sandusky in June 1988, when he was a 16-year-old standout high school quarterback from Leominster, Massachusetts, at an invitation-only Penn State football camp for young players, according to court documents.

After Sandusky's arrest in 2011, Spinelli came forward.

Although the state police found his complaint credible, the appeal brief says, then-Attorney General Linda Kelly took no action.

He was not among the eight victims who testified in Sandusky's 2012 trial. Ditka said Thursday the statute of limitations problem drove Kelly's decision.

Kelly could not be reached for comment. Kane took over the post in 2013. REUTERS

Toyota, Microsoft, Chrysler among big advertisers for Yahoo NFL game

Tech giant guarantees brands 3.5 million streams in United States, buyers said.

Toyota Motor Corp., Microsoft Corp. and Chrysler are among the brands that will advertise this weekend during Yahoo Inc.'s first live-streamed National Football League game, the Internet company said Thursday.

Yahoo will stream Sunday's game between the Buffalo Bills and Jacksonville Jaguars, the first time viewers around the world can watch an NFL game online free. It kicks off in London at 2:30 p.m., or 9:30 a.m. Eastern time.

"We are completely sold out on ads," Lisa Utzschneider, Yahoo's chief revenue officer, told Reuters in an interview, adding that more than 30 brands had signed up to advertise.

Early birds in the United States can watch the pregame show starting at 8 a.m. Eastern time with commentary from Yahoo's fantasy football experts, who will also answer questions from viewers. Dairy Queen is the pregame sponsor and Toyota is the half-time sponsor.

Chrysler, Microsoft and American Express are among the brands that have bought 15- to 30-second spots during the game, Utzschneider said.

Advertisers had the option to target spots domestically or globally, meaning viewers in London, for example, may see different ads than viewers in New York, Utzschneider said.

"All distribution formats are on the table for future games."
Vishal Shah

Over the past few months, Yahoo dropped its asking price for ads during the game to less than $100,000 from $200,000, two media buyers familiar with the situation told Reuters.

While the opportunity to advertise during the game may be attractive to global brands, it is less so for U.S. brands because the game is early for West Coast viewers, and fans in the game's local markets will be able to view it on television on CBS affiliates, the sources told Reuters.

Still, advertisers are interested to see how many viewers tune in and if the game results in future partnerships between the NFL and Yahoo or its competitors.

The NFL will be taking a close look at not just how many viewers watch the game, but which devices they're watching it on, the quality of the viewing experience, whether the game draws a larger share of millennial viewers and how they are using social media to talk about it, said Vishal Shah, the NFL's vice president of digital media strategy.

The league also will study viewership in various regions, he said. The game will take place in prime time in Asian markets.

The NFL has other online offerings. Game highlights and news appear on platforms such as Twitter and YouTube. Live games can be watched on various apps by customers with pay TV subscriptions.

Seventh St. Louis church door fire under investigation

The first six houses of worship hit in string of arson attacks were near one another: two in Jennings, a suburb, and four in north of the city.

St. Joseph Church GOOGLE MAPS

An arson fire at the door of the rectory of the Shrine of St. Joseph Catholic church in St. Louis early Thursday was the seventh such incident in the area in two weeks, fire officials said.

Federal and local authorities are investigating the spate of fires set at doors of churches with primarily black congregations in the St. Louis area since Oct. 8, and $9,000 in award money has been offered for information leading to the arrest of those responsible.

Thursday's fire at the doors of the rectory, or priest's residence, was reported at 1:34 a.m. and was immediately extinguished, the St. Louis Fire Department. The rectory was unoccupied at the time and no injuries were reported, it said.

No one has been injured in the small fires that have damaged two Catholic and five Protestant churches. Most have primarily black congregations, although local media reported that the Shrine of St. Joseph church has a mostly white congregation.

A prayer vigil Wednesday night at one of the churches, New Northside Baptist in Jennings, drew more than 200 people, including leaders from a number of denominations, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch reported.

Sweden struggles to cope with migrant tide; PM warns about threat

Europe is struggling to cope with its biggest wave of migrants since World War II.

Police officers prevent migrants from entering Croatia, in the Serbian-Croatian border, in Berkasovo. Thousands have been making their way from Turkey to the Balkans, hoping to reach Germany, Sweden and other EU states. GETTY IMAGES

"We have seen pictures of people who are literally walking from Greece across the Balkans to Germany and on to Sweden."

Agency head Anders Danielsson

Sweden said on Thursday it expected up to 190,000 migrants this year, putting unprecedented strain on a country famous for welcoming refugees but planning to house many in tents this winter.

At the opposite pole of the angry debate on the migration crisis, Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orban urged European leaders to change their immigration policies and consult voters, or face a threat to the democratic order.

Thousands of refugees continued to pour into Slovenia in the hope of reaching prosperous northern Europe, and the tiny country appealed for other European Union states to send police to help manage the flow.

According to the International Organization for Migration, more than 670,000 people have arrived by sea this year, fleeing war zones and poverty in the Middle East, Africa and Asia.

Sweden's Migration Agency said more than 30,000 of the 140-190,000 people it expected in 2015 would be unaccompanied children. Such numbers are much higher, as a proportion of Sweden's population of under 10 million, than even the 800,000-plus expected by Germany.

The agency said it would need an additional 70 billion Swedish crowns ($8.41 billion) over the next two years to cope.

More than 100,000 have already arrived in Sweden this year, topping the previous record during the Balkan wars in the early 1990s.

Nearly 10,000 came in the past week alone.

"Last night all our places were full," Danielsson said.

The Agency estimated it would face a shortage of accommodation for 25,000-45,000 migrants by the end of the year. Tens of thousands could spend the cold Swedish winter in heated tents. REUTERS

Most support NRA despite criticism after shootings

Most Americans maintain a favorable view of the National Rifle Association despite criticism and a presidential rebuke of the gun lobby after a massacre in Oregon this month, Gallup said on Thursday.

The NRA is viewed favorably by 58 percent of Americans, Gallup said. That compares with 54 percent after the December 2012 shooting at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Connecticut, and is just 2 points below its highest showing in Gallup polls since 1989.

Another poll by Gallup, released earlier this week, showed 55 percent of Americans prefer tighter regulations on gun sales, something the NRA generally opposes. Pro-gun groups say increased background checks for gun buyers could infringe on Second Amendment rights to keep and bear arms.

NRA convention GETTY IMAGES

After a gunman shot dead nine people at Umpqua Community College in Roseburg, Oregon, and was himself killed by police on Oct. 1, President Barack Obama angrily said the country had made a "political choice" to allow mass shootings and condemned the NRA for blocking reform of U.S. gun laws.

"Somehow this has become routine," Obama said. "We've become numb to this."

Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton has said she wants to build a "national movement" to counter the influence of the NRA.

THE FUN STARTS HERE

"Jem and the Holograms" is the latest in a long line of films about all-female bands. Here are seven of the best.

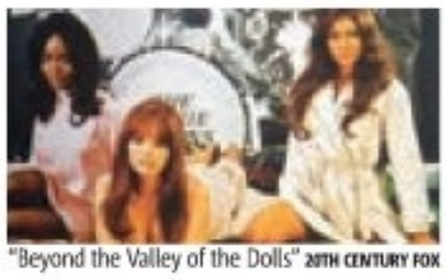
RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

On Friday, "Jem and the Holograms" — about suburban teen YouTube sensations turned pink-haired pop stars — opens in theaters. Though rumor has it the movie bears little resemblance to the truly outrageous 1980s cult cartoon series that inspired it, "Jem" does have a few things going for it: Ziggy Stardust-worthy makeup (on fleek), Juliette Lewis as an evil music manager and — most important — girls, rocking out.

Rock 'n' roll has long been a symbol of rebellion, but it's particularly subversive when played by women. Think of 1970s feminist punk trio The Slits, who were thrown out of more hotels and more feared than any of their male contemporaries, or on the pop spectrum, Madonna and Miley Cyrus, who have both inspired hand-wringing about the downfall of moral society.

That kind of power to upset and shock people is why directors keep making movies about all-girl bands. They not only have the potential to subvert Hollywood's — and the larger culture's — gender norms, combat conformity and indulge in sensationalism (drugs, lesbianism, etc.); they provide a natural vehicle to explore female friendship and identity (something sorely lacking in most films). Besides, it's exhilarating to watch a group of gals tear it up.

Whether "Jem" is worthy to join the ranks of such anarchic treasures as "Ladies and Gentlemen, the Fabulous Stains" or even "Spice World" remains to be seen. But in honor of its release — and of rebel girls everywhere — we have rounded up a few of the best movies celebrating girl power.



"Beyond the Valley of the Dolls" 20TH CENTURY FOX

'Beyond the Valley of the Dolls' (1970)

At the center of this Roger Ebert-penned sex-and-drug-fueled exploitation flick is the Carrie Nations (née the Kelly Affair), a trio of musical babes who travel to Los Angeles in search of fame. What seems on its face a morality tale (things soon spiral out of control for the gals, as is wont to happen in late '60s Hollywood) is actually a balls-out satire of celebrity, pop culture and pretty much everything we hold sacred.

"Ladies and Gentlemen, the Fabulous Stains" PARAMOUNT PICTURES

'Ladies and Gentlemen, the Fabulous Stains' (1982)

One of the best rock movies ever made, "The Stains" features a group of teenagers (including a young Diane Lane and Laura Dern) who can barely play or sing but, in true punk fashion, form a band anyway. Much to the consternation of male rock critics, they begin to use their platform to spread the gospel of feminism, inspiring young girls everywhere to dye their hair, run away from home and form their own bands. Lane's skunk-like hair and wild face paint still slay.

"Desperately Seeking Susan" ORION PICTURES

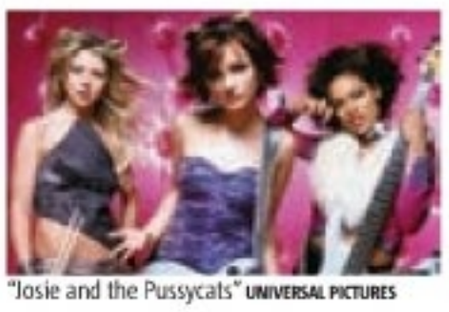
'Desperately Seeking Susan' (1985)

Though not technically a movie about a rock band, this mad caper about mistaken identities and general hell-raising is about as close to punk's anarchic spirit as you can get. Plus, its leather-clad heroines — played by Madonna (in her first film role) and Rosanna Arquette — are actually celebrated for their antics instead of chastised.

Spice World COLUMBIA PICTURES

'Spice World' (1997)

OK, hear us out: This update on the Beatles' "Hard Day's Night" featuring Scary, Baby, Sporty, Posh and Ginger getting ready for an epic concert in London, is a third-wave feminist romp, showing that these gals can party, cause a sensation and wreak havoc even better than the Fab Four.



"Josie and the Pussycats" UNIVERSAL PICTURES

'Josie and the Pussycats' (2001)

Like "Jem," this film, about a trio of girl rockers, was based on a cartoon. Though it bombed at the box office, it has become a cult classic, remembered for its sly take-down of corporate greed and conformity. The tunes — sung by '90s group Letters to Cleo — are super catchy, and it stars a wonderfully slimy Alan Cumming as the (slightly inept) villain.

"The Runaways" SONY PICTURES

'The Runaways' (2010)

Kristen Stewart plays a baby Joan Jett in this biopic about her first teen rock band, The Runaways. Part punk, part glam, the group had long been dismissed as something of a shock act due to its young members' provocative antics and innuendo-laden lyrics. Here, the talented ladies get their due.

"We Are the Best!" MAGNOLIA PICTURES

'We Are the Best!' (2014)

Two Swedish misfits want to start a punk band, so they recruit a fundamentalist Christian folkie at their school to teach them guitar. The three form an unlikely friendship, and this sweet, delightfully scrappy film chronicles the rocky road to their first messy, riot-inducing basement gig. No fame and glory, but they don't care. These girls just wanna have fun.

Elijah Wood isn't afraid of Vin Diesel

The star got to see the dorky side of his he-man co-star on "The Last Witch Hunter."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Wood plays a priest charged with aiding a fearsome assassin (Vin Diesel) in "The Last Witch Hunter." SCOTT GARFIELD

Like his "Lord of the Rings" co-stars, Elijah Wood has the luxury of being picky. He could have settled for a string of never-ending fantasy knockoffs. Instead, like Viggo Mortensen, he's done what he wants. The last decade has seen him lending his presence to smaller and/or unusual fare: the first-person horror "Maniac"; "Open Windows," set entirely on a desktop; the TV show "Wilfred," in which he acts opposite a talking dog. Wood comes back to both big budgets and fantasy with "The Last Witch Hunter," a supersized Vin Diesel vehicle in which he plays the new priestly sidekick to the star's immortal slayer of the supernatural. He didn't take the job lightly.

First off, I should ask about Vin Diesel. He seems like he might not be as intimidating as his screen image.
He's many things. He's lovely. He's friendly to everybody. He's got a big personality. He's also kind of not intimidating. I think people would think he's intimidating. He sort of isn't. He's a softie. He's also a big D&D fan, and he's a big Tolkien nerd and a fantasy fan. In a lot of ways, this character is closer to him than anything he's done in the past. That's cool to know there's this side to him that doesn't get expressed much in cinema. But it's a big part of who he is.

What convinced you this was a worthy return to big-budget genre fare?
It's weird to even say this, because it wasn't the case 20 years ago, but it was interesting to read something that was not based on a pre-existing source or was a sequel. It's bizarre that we have to say one of a film's merits is that it's original. F—ing strange. But it is the case. So it was interesting to me that something was going to be made on this scale that was entirely original. And I was just surprised by the script. I found the mythology to be really detailed, the world-building to be really interesting.

The sets appear to be mostly real, as do many of the effects.
Some people are asking questions about what it was like to deal with the CG. In reality, it was almost imperceptible to us — save for the witch bar, where there was quite a bit of CG effects. But even there, there were a lot of practical effects. Most of the time, we were surrounded by real things. Even the sentinel at the end — there was a sentinel there. That goes a long way to making you feel rooted in the space.

Is it typical for you to get so involved with looking at all aspects of a production?
These are all questions I ask, honestly. When I read something, I want to know what the approach is, who's going to shoot it, how it's going to be shot, what is the visual tone of the film and what are the designs going to look like. I'm a nerd, so I always ask these questions.

'Witch Hunter' is a dorky fever dream

"The Last Witch Hunter"

Director: Breck Eisner
Stars: Vin Diesel, Rose Leslie
Rating: PG-13

● ● ○ ○ ○

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

In "The Last Witch Hunter," Vin Diesel is fond of fire swords, but he sometimes dispatches his supernatural beasties with guns and knives and stuff. SCOTT GARFIELD

"The Last Witch Hunter" isn't based on a book series. But it feels like it is. And perhaps it should be. It's a riot of dense, impenetrable mythology about Vin Diesel's Kaulder, a slayer cursed with immortality, "Highlander"-style, now cruising about New York City, keeping an underworld of witches in line. There's a token conspiracy that forces Kaulder to team with a nice witch (Rose Leslie) who has the secret power of invading other people's dreams, and who is also a bartender.

Weirdness gets piled on like a mile-high "Scooby Doo" sandwich. There's a blocky monster who works for a witch council. There's Michael Caine, mostly playing a corpse. There's a tree made of gummi bears. The wacko keeps coming, and the world expands ever outward, like the tendrils that spring from the film's many, many pieces of tree and wood imagery.

Maybe we even succumb to the insanity. It's the only sane response. It can be freeing, even fun, to give yourself over to a film like "The Last Witch Hunter," especially because it comes from a good place. It was ushered forth by its star, a not-so-secret D&D and Tolkien nerd who actually seems to be having fun. In the last few "Fast and/or Furious" outings, he's seemed sleepy, if not full-on narcoleptic. But in "The Last Witch Hunter," he cracks jokes, even flirts with Leslie. "Witch Hunter" has the ricketiest of foundations, but at least it's not hollow.

A scene of Bill Murray playing "Smoke on the Water" for native Afghans doesn't go so well in "Rock the Kasbah." KERRY HAYES

"Rock the Kasbah"

Director: Barry Levinson
Stars: Bill Murray, Kate Hudson

Bill Murray has been an untouchable god since "Rushmore," or perhaps forever, so it's odd to think of him ever being terrible. Yet here's "Rock the Kasbah," which is a good/bad way of seeing Murray at his worst. It's him indulging in his laziest and most clueless tendencies, among them ignoring an obviously sloppy and dumb script that teems with Ugly Americanisms.

"Rock the Kasbah" is essentially "Bill Murray Goes to Afghanistan," with his scuzzy music promoter winding up in Kabul intending to put on a show; instead, he gets gunplay and jokes about foreigners. Eventually he scores a new find: an Afghan tribeswoman who has the chops to be the first woman participant on "Afghan Idol."

Murray won't let this turn into a soft-hearted "Danny Collins," but he does seem ill-advisedly game to just act like a doofus in another country. And this is how a comic institution becomes actively annoying. An endless scene of him howling "Smoke on the Water" in front of confused tribesmen is a low point in the Murray canon. It makes "Larger Than Life," the elephant comedy from his pre-"Rushmore" dog days, look enticing. MP

Aubrey Peeples (with "Aladdin Sane" face paint) tries to overcome the evil managerial stylings of Juliette Lewis in the "Jem and the Holograms" movie. UNIVERSAL PICTURES

'Jem and the Holograms'

Director: Jon M. Chu
Stars: Aubrey Peeples, Juliette Lewis

A straight-faced "Josie and the Pussycats" but with a robot, the "Jem and the Holograms" movie is an earnest melodrama, and an origin story, but also a sometime sci-fi movie, plus a YA movie, as well as a movie for the Miley/Taylor generation, and even occasionally an ad-lib-heavy comedy, because those are popular too. It's a movie about a crisis of identity: Shy teen Jerrica (Aubrey Peeples) can only sing through her titular persona, which includes pink hair and a hot red "Aladdin Sane" streak across her face. But it's also a movie with a crisis of identity.

For a while, things seem simple, even dull. Jerrica and sibs are just aspiring musicians who go viral, which shuffles them into the hands of blatantly evil label owner Erica Raymond, played with copious, awe-inspiring bitchiness by Juliette Lewis. For a while, you might think an old Hasbro toon has been turned into a painfully ordinary tale of corruption in the music biz. Then comes the robot. This is a sci-fi movie too? Goofy and bleep-blooping in the George Lucas mold, he's mostly around to spice up a narrative that was being made fun of all the way back in 1970's "Beyond the Valley of the Dolls."

For a film with futuristic tech (but only two holograms), it's too often stuck in the boring real world, not the fantastical one of the show. These are all problems that can be fixed in the sequel, for this is also, on top of everything else, in its final moments a Marvel movie, with a bumper touting stuff that would baffle everyone but the fans. What to see at the Philadelphia Film Festival

Now in its 24th year, the Philadelphia Film Festival is, as usual, a mix of awards-season biggies and diamonds in the rough. Here are some titles you should consider in the first week of the PFF, which runs from Oct. 22 through Nov. 1. MATT PRIGGE AND GARY M. KRAMER

"CAROL"

Cate Blanchett's 1950s society gal falls for a woman (Rooney Mara) in "Carol," one of the Philadelphia Film Festival's biggest gets. Visit filmadelphia.org/festival for showtimes and tickets. CREDIT FOR ALL PFF EXCEPT WHERE NOTED

Todd Haynes' lesbian drama, in which Rooney Mara's 1950s shopgirl is pursued by a wealthy dame (Cate Blanchett), isn't a straight-up political film like the didactic and artless "Freeheld." It's in fact artful — an impossibly lush romance in a minor key that's more interested in exploring how one conducts the business of love when one can't even say its name. Blanchett and Mara carefully negotiate the terms of a relationship that's prevented by both sexual mores and class, putting us in the head space of people forced to think practically about the least practical of emotions. (MP)

"BROOKLYN"

"Brooklyn" FOX SEARCHLIGHT

An old-time romance sensitive and patient enough to make you wish it went deeper, "Brooklyn" heads to the 1950s to watch the courtship between a young Irishwoman (Saoirse Ronan) new to New York and a shy, earnest Italian-American (Michael Zegen). Like "Carol," the subject is whether true love can actually form given the restrictions of society and life; here the boundaries involve different cultures and the pull of back home. Just as it's threatening to expose unhappy truths about the fickleness of the human heart, it pulls back, settling for something more pat and reassuring, even pandering. But it's beautifully made and felt enough that you might not mind. (MP)

"MY GOLDEN DAYS"

"My Golden Days"

France's Arnaud Desplechin likes his films overstuffed. That's what makes them intoxicating, though, and "My Golden Days" — a prequel of sorts to his great 1996 "My Sex Life," following the school days of the character played by Mathieu Amalric, the director's own Robert De Niro — treats what could be a mere tale of young love to a flurry of grumpiness, romanticism, darting camerawork and George Clinton on repeat. (MP)

'ANOMALISA'

In this fabulous, stop-motion animated film, Michael Stone (David Thewlis) is a motivational speaker on a business trip to Cincinnati. His life is so colorless it could be in black-and-white. However, when he meets the effusive Lisa (Jennifer Jason Leigh), he is awakened by a unique quality of hers (that should not be revealed). "Anomalisa" has a canny conceit, one that co-directors Charlie Kaufman and Duke Johnson use to hang funny-clever running jokes, sight gags and other gimmicks that will satisfy discerning viewers. But the film also has a deliberately somber Edward Hopper-esque melancholia that is highly affecting. (GMK)

Put your hands inside the puppet head in opening night film "Anomalisa."

"DISORDER"

Diane Kruger and Matthias Schoenaerts star in "Disorder."

In this slow-burn French import, Vincent (Matthias Schoenaerts) is a beefy soldier with PTSD. Taking a personal security job for Whalid (Percy Kemp), he is assigned to "babysit" Whalid's wife, Jessie (Diane Kruger), and their son, Ali (Zaid Errougui-Demonsant), for 48 hours. Vincent takes his work seriously — possibly too seriously — as he eavesdrops, observes and perceives threats. Director/co-writer Alice Winocour shrewdly uses sound, silence and video to immerse viewers in Vincent's mind-set, and she ratchets up the tension as he dutifully protects his clients from chaos. As a character study, "Disorder" may be a bit thin, but Schoenaerts is superb. (GMK)

"THE LOBSTER"

John C. Reilly, Ben Whishaw and Colin Farrell are out for love in "The Lobster."

• • • • •

For his third film, "Dogtooth" maker Yorgos Lanthimos gets a name international cast, but everything else is the same. Once again he focuses on an absurdist form of oppression, here a dystopia where the single are shlepped off to a country house, where they have 45 days to mate or else. Or else what? Or else they're turned into the animal of their choice, of course. With Colin Farrell, Rachel Weisz and John C. Reilly as the sadsacks, it's at once pitch-black hilarious and impossibly sad, depicting a world where all joy of human interaction has been reduced to spirit-crushing practicality, enforced by a revolving-door cast of oppressors. (MP)

"ROOM"

Jacob Tremblay and Brie Larson enjoy some alone time in "Room." A24

• • • • •

A traumatic story told with grace and even pep, "Frank" director Lenny Abrahmson's fest favorite lets us slowly piece together why a young mother (Brie Larson) and her rambunctious 5-year-old (Jacob Tremblay) never seem to leave a box-size room. The truth is deeply upsetting, but this is the rare film that doesn't shove our faces in horrors, instead hewing to a hyperactive child's perspective. The second half, when things turn much different and much calmer, can't help but feel like a necessary evil, but the first is dynamic filmmaking that does its two game leads right. (MP)

"EL CINCO"

"El Cinco"

• • • • •

A lovely, modest gem, "El Cinco" concerns Paton (Esteban Lamothe), an Argentine soccer captain whose suspension from the game has prompted him to pursue a life off the pitch. Although he seems ill-suited to school and has trouble making professional decisions, his relationship with his wife, Ale (Julieta Zylberberg), is reinvigorated. The ingratiating Lamothe gives a beautifully modulated performance as a man struggling to reinvent himself. His anger and frustrations are palpable, as is the support Ale provides. "El Cinco" is both moving and inspiring as it delicately traces the ways — large and small — these realistic characters change. (GMK)

"MEN & CHICKEN"

"Men & Chicken"

• • • • •

Elias (Mads Mikkelsen) and Gabriel (David Dencik) head to an island where their half-brothers live in an abandoned sanitarium. Then things get really bizarre. "Men & Chicken" has a screwball sensibility as the siblings fight violently, argue over (and swap) dinner plates and cage rule-breakers. Writer/director Anders Thomas Jensen does have good reasons for this anarchy and absurdity, but as Elias and Gabriel are warned: It may be better not to know. (GMK)

"THE TREASURE"

"The Treasure"

• • • • •

Corneliu Porumboiu's "The Treasure" is a buried treasure movie, but it's also a Romanian New Wave movie — films that err toward the grim and hopeless, capturing a society tied up in Kafkaesque bureaucracy. As such, this simple adventure gets hilariously dragged down to a particularly miserable place on earth. You may think you know the grim place this is going to end. As it turns out, you're wrong — hysterically, unforgettably wrong. (MP)

Keeping it 'Classic' at Powerhouse

Jidenna is on the lineup for the sold-out Power 99 concert, along with Meek Mill, Kendrick Lamar, Rae Sremmurd and more.

CHRIS JORDAN
@MetroPhilly

Just how classy is "Classic Man" singer Jidenna? Classy enough to name-check Nat "King" Cole.

"I intentionally put his name in the record to put more children on to his brilliance," says Jidenna via email. "When I was a boy, I learned about Fred Astaire through Michael Jackson. I'm just doing my part in passing the baton."

Cole, Astaire and Jackson — that's a few generations of classic. Jidenna, who will be dressed to the nines, we're sure, is set to perform in the big Power 99 Powerhouse show Friday at the Wells Fargo Center with Meek Mill, Fetty Wap, Kendrick Lamar, Big Sean, Rae Sremmurd, Future, Jeremih, Omarion and Migos. Plus more than a few surprises, no doubt.

Rae Sremmurd GETTY IMAGES

The unique Rae Sremmurd

Hip-hop duo Rae Sremmurd just had 12 crazy months, with hit records ("No Flex Zone" and "No Type"), a BET Award for Best Group and plenty of attempts to pronounce their name. It's their record label, Ear Drummers, spelled backwards, and it's pronounced "ray shrimer."

"We came in the industry not trying to be like nobody else, because everybody was trying to be the same," says Khalif "Swae Lee" Brown, one half of Rae Sremmurd alongside his brother, Aaquil "Slim Jxmmi" Brown.

"We're trying to show the world what we do," he says. "We're about individuality and about being yourself, no matter what somebody else is."

coming for us, and you know Meek has a lot of amazing friends," says Power 99 midday disc jockey Cappuchino, aka Cheryl Haygen. "Maybe Meek will be getting with Drake to mend out their friendship. You never know what's going to go down."

If a Drake and Mr. Dreamchaser detente on the Powerhouse stage seems a bit unlikely, perhaps a guest appearance by Meek's gal, Nicki Minaj, is in the cards for the show?

As for other highlights, Fetty Wap, despite breaking his leg in a Jersey motorcycle accident last month, is still set to perform, Haygen says.

"This has been Fetty Wap's year," she says. "He was at the iHeartRadio festival [in Las Vegas last month] and he popped up with a pop group [Fall Out Boy]. This has been an amazing year for him."

Look for Cappuchino, who's on air weekdays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., on stage and check out Power99.com for backstage dish and dirt during the soldout show.

"It should be very interesting backstage," she says.

Aries If you have been spending too much time on your career lately, getting together with friends will remind you how to have fun.

Taurus Financial security and risk-taking will not be compatible. Do your research carefully before you spend your hard-earned cash.

Gemini Listen to what others have to say. Don't judge someone based on hearsay or rumors. Your assumptions will not be valid.

Cancer Refer to those with experience to find solutions. Whether you have professional or personal issues, someone you know will give you sound advice.

Leo Socialize if you crave excitement. Take part in community events in order to meet a wide assortment of people you will enjoy spending time with.

Virgo It's OK to think big, but keep matters in perspective. Take small steps if you want to reach your destination. Don't try to do too much at once.

Libra Don't join the fight when you can become the mediator. You have the ability to say the right thing in order to defuse a volatile situation.

Scorpio Overspending will put your budget in jeopardy. Don't try to buy your way into someone's heart. Your time will bring the best rewards.

Sagittarius You will be tense and stressed out. A physical activity will help you burn off steam. Put your excess energy to good use with exercise.

Capricorn Others will consider your help meddling by another name. Keep your opinions to yourself in order to avoid a rift.

Aquarius Change is in the air. You have fabulous ideas that will help streamline or modernize your job. Convince colleagues to join you.

Pisces A relationship will turn turbulent. Remember that it takes two to argue. Make amends if you have been too demanding. EUGENIA LAST

76ers roster taking shape

Metro projects the Sixers 2015-16 NBA roster with the season a week away from tipping off.

EVAN MACY
@evan_macy
evan.macy@metro.us

Who will join Nerlens Noel and Jahlil Okafor on the 76ers roster this season? GETTY IMAGES

As the Sixers gear up for their final preseason game Friday against the Celtics, all eyes are on the team's final roster spots and who will make the cut when that number gets trimmed down to 15 on Monday.

There are 12 names that are seemingly locks to make the team based on their contracts and worth to the organization. Jahlil Okafor, Nerlens Noel, Joel Embiid, Robert Covington, Nik Stauskas, Jerami Grant, Richaun Holmes, Tony Wroten, Kendall Marshall, JaKarr Sampson, Isaiah Canaan and Hollis Thompson seem to have done enough to not sweat it out this weekend when cuts are made.

Carl Landry, acquired as part of the Nik Stauskas trade with the Kings this summer, might stick around for contract reasons and veteran leadership as the 13th piece. That leaves potentially two roster spots up for grabs out of the remaining group.

Much praise has been given to the play of both power forward Christian Wood and point guard T.J. McConnell throughout the preseason and they'll have one last chance to prove themselves worthy of a roster spot on Friday.

In the Sixers fourth preseason game against the Knicks, Wood registered a double-double with 13 points and 10 rebounds in 20 minutes. Brett Brown has raved about his potential and upside so far in preseason. Wood is confident he'll be back at practice Monday.

"I think my chances [to make the roster] are pretty high," Wood said. "I think I've showed the GM and coach what I can do. I think they see it, so I think I have a pretty good chance of making the team."

McConnell, although he has played well so far, is more of a long shot. In the four preseason games in which McConnell has played, he's averaged 7.3 points, 5.8 assists and 2.8 steals in 24 minutes. Coaches love his toughness and prowess on the defensive end.

"Toughness, tenacity and point-guard intellect," Brown said of McConnell. "He has a combination of speed and quickness. His ability to push the ball from baseline to baseline is an A. His ability to pick up full court and pressure the ball is an A."

Canaan, the projected starting point guard, put up great numbers offensively in the preseason, scoring 14 points per game in 29 minutes. But his court vision and defensive intensity have come into question amongst analysts and coaches. McConnell might be the perfect player to compliment him with the last roster spot.

The cutting floor

Jordan McRae
McRae has averaged 7.3 points, 2.3 rebounds and 1.8 assists on a miserable 28 percent shooting.

J.P. Tokoto
Tokoto has been glued to the bench in preseason, averaging just 9.8 minutes per game and hasn't really done anything worthy of a roster spot.

Pierre Jackson
A groin injury this summer has severely limited Jackson's usual explosive play and has all but dashed his hopes of making the roster. He's averaging just 2.0 points and 2.0 assists in two games.

Scottie Wilbekin
Wilbekin has shown flashes of his scoring during the preseason. He notched 21 points against the Wizards last week and has scored in double figures in his past three games. Unfortunately, Isaiah Canaan has shown just a little more in the scoring column.

Furkan Aldemir
He posted just one good performance this preseason, 12 points and 14 rebounds in a loss to the Wizards. He may have lost what seemed to be a given roster spot.

Look out for the top matchups in NFL Week 7

One-week fantasy football players might not realize this because they have their head down grinding out lineups, but we have reached the traditional season-long fantasy halfway point. It is all downhill (or uphill) from here.

Passing Matchup Gems

1. CHARGERS VS. RAIDERS
You don't need to know the Raiders are the second-worst defense against the pass. Rivers just ripped a good Green Bay Packers defense for over 500 yards. The Chargers are also back home after losing two consecutive games.

2. COWBOYS VS. GIANTS
You might not trust Matt Cassel ($6,400) in his first Cowboys start, but he is facing a weak Giants secondary that has allowed the third-most passing yards this season. Cassel, Jason Witten ($5,600), Terrance Williams ($5,900) and Cole Beasley ($5,200) are options to fill out lineups with short money.

Rushing Matchup Gems

1. GURLEY VS. BROWNS
Gurley ($7,400) should already be on the top of everyone's lineup list, as we wrote in Wednesday's Fantasy Class. He has made two starts in his young career and averaged over 150 yards, 25 touches and 6.2 yards per carry.

2. PETERSON VS. LIONS
The Lions are sixth-worst against the run and have allowed the second-most rushing touchdowns to fantasy backs, per FFToday.com. Peterson ($8,900) should be busy here.

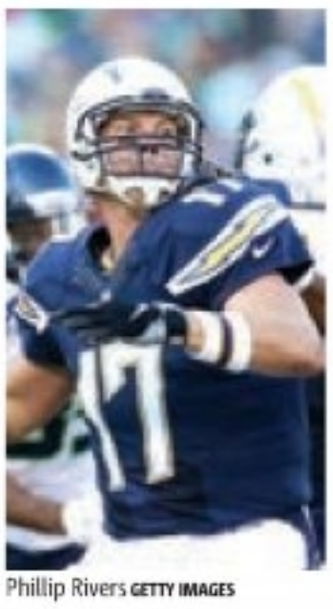
Defenses vs. Bad QBs

1. REDSKINS VS. WINSTON
The Tampa Bay Buccaneers and Jameis Pick-6-ston return from their bye week against an underrated Redskins defense ranked eighth in the NFL right now. The Redskins are a value at $4,400.

2. FALCONS VS. MARIOTA
Mariota has been dealing with a knee issue, so he will not be 100 percent if he does play. Also, Dan Quinn's presence is a lot more significant than you might have imagined.

FanDuel

NFL Picks



Phillip Rivers GETTY IMAGES

In Week 7 action, pick the home favorites Chargers, Panthers

Falcons (-4) at Titans
The Titans dropped to 1-4 on the season last week after getting thrashed by the suddenly-rejuvenated Dolphins. Aside from their Week 1 domination of the Buccaneers, the Titans have looked like anything but a good team all season. The Falcons score early and often, and RB Davonta Freeman should have his way with the Titans' lackluster rush defense. Tennessee has the No. 1 pass defense statistically, but they've faced Jameis Winston, Josh McCown, Matt Hasselbeck, Tyrod Taylor and Ryan Tannehill. The pick: Falcons -4

Raiders at Chargers (-4)
If I gave you five guesses at who the No. 1 offense in football is, I doubt you would come up with the 2-4 Chargers, but it's true. Yet they've scored less than 23 PPG, mostly due to poorly timed turnovers. The Chargers have a weak offensive line (17 sacks allowed) but the Raiders do not do a good job at getting to the QB (just 10 sacks on the year), so Philip Rivers should be able to orchestrate his offense without duress. The Raiders have the seventh-worst defense in the NFL, so the Chargers should have no problem putting up points. The pick: Chargers -4

Eagles at Panthers (-3)
The 5-0 Panthers showed that they are a legitimate playoff threat last week with a last-minute win in Seattle against the Seahawks. I am far from impressed with the Eagles' last two wins over the Saints and Giants; the Panthers have played like a far better team than either of those two squads. Eagles fans should be petrified at the prospect of INT-machine Sam Bradford throwing against the dangerous Carolina defense, which has forced 11 turnovers in five games, among the league leaders in that category. I don't think the Eagles' defense has an answer for Cam Newton.
The pick: Panthers -3

- Buffalo Bills (-4.5) vs. Jacksonville Jaguars (London)
- Minnesota Vikings (-2.5) at Detroit Lions
- New Orleans Saints at Indianapolis Colts (-4.5)
- Pittsburgh Steelers (-2) at Kansas City Chiefs
- Houston Texans at Miami Dolphins (-4)
- New York Jets at New England Patriots (-9)
- Cleveland Browns at St. Louis Rams (-6)
- Tampa Bay Buccaneers at Washington Redskins (-3)
- Dallas Cowboys at New York Giants (-3.5)
- Baltimore Ravens at Arizona Cardinals (-8.5) (Monday night)

3 Things to watch for as Eagles try to hand Carolina first loss

Can the Eagles front seven shut down the Panthers third-ranked rushing attack?

EVAN MACY
@evan_macy
evan.macy@metro.us

The Eagles are back on track at 3-3.

They are also atop the NFC East standings, where many picked them to be at the beginning of the season.

With their bye week looming in Week 8, the Eagles are looking to enter their break on a high note. It could be a tall task as they'll head to face the Panthers in Carolina on Sunday in another prime time affair (8:30 p.m. on NBC).

It's a rematch of last year's demolition at Lincoln Financial Field, where the Birds beat Carolina, 45-21, to move to 7-2.

In that game, running back LeSean McCoy ran for just 19 yards on 11 carries — but then-rookie wideout Jordan Matthews had a breakout game with 138 yards and two touchdowns.

The Panthers' defense is much better this season, and quarterback Cam Newton is playing the best football of his career as the team boasts a perfect 5-0 record. It will be a good test for the Eagles recently dynamic and game-changing defense.

Here are three things to watch for Sunday night:

Cam Newton's 56 percent completion rating is a career low this season. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Counter Cam, Carolina run

Carolina may not have the most potent running game in football, but they could be the team most dedicated to establishing the run each game. They lead the NFL in rushing attempts per game.

And obviously as their record reflects, it's worked.

"The challenge is they are going to try to pound you and they have got a back in Jonathan [Stewart] who a big, physical downhill running back," Chip Kelly said. "And then you have a quarterback – and it's different than other zone-read-type teams you face where it's a quick, agile quarterback that's going to break outside — in [Newton], who can pound you, too, because he's — unlike many quarterbacks — got to be the biggest quarterback in the league from that standpoint in terms of rushing."

The Eagles run defense is in the middle of the road as far as rankings go. They are the 11th-best run D, allowing just over 94 yards per game.

Bad Bradford

Sam Bradford has lead the Eagles to back-to-back victories but is also on pace to shatter his personal worst for interceptions in a season.

With nine (and nine touchdown passes as well) through six games, Bradford threw three ugly picks last week in a 27-7 win against the Giants and threw two more in a win against the Saints the week before.

Though the defense has kept opposing offenses out of the end zone, ball security has to be a top concern for the Eagles as they prepare for Carolina. Offensive coordinator Pat Shurmur says he has confidence in his QB.

"We had a couple of interceptions which you've got to eliminate, for whatever reason, and I think he will," Shurmur said. "I think he'll do that, and I think he'll continue to get better. He hasn't played a lot of football in the last two years, and we're bringing him back. We're fortunate enough to be winning games, however we're doing it, and this thing is a 16-game journey until hopefully you're in the playoffs competing to win it all."

Nolan Carroll had a game-changing pick-six against the Giants on Monday.

Secondary first

Last year, the Eagles weak secondary — arguably — was the reason the team missed the playoffs.

What a difference a year makes.

With two of the best safeties in the NFL (based on their performance so far), Walter Thurmond and Malcolm Jenkins, leading the Eagles back end — and cornerbacks Byron Maxwell, Nolan Carroll and Eric Rowe doing a pretty decent job alongside them — the unit has become an area of strength for Philly.

And though Panthers tight end Greg Olsen is a difficult matchup for any team, the Panthers are one of the worst groups in football through the air, ranking 30th of 32 teams with barely 200 yards per game.

Look for the Eagles secondary to shine once again, making their control of Cam Newton's read-option and the ground game the key for the Panthers to succeed offensively.
